

CHRISTINA DORFHUBER is a principal with Deloitte Consulting, one of the largest consulting service companies in the world. She current leads Deloitte's U.S. National Public Sector Strategy and Operations practice. Christina has been consulting in the public sector for over 18 years after working for both federal and state governments.

Christina joined Deloitte in 1996 focusing on major government transformation and efficiency efforts that included significant process and system change. Some of her most notable clients include: state of Michigan, state of Wisconsin, commonwealths of Pennsylvania and Kentucky and the state of Ohio.

In her role as the national public sector strategy and operations lead, Christina is actively involved in developing the firm's capabilities and expertise in government cost reduction, business process reengineering, customer relationship management, and operational performance improvement. She has presented numerous talks and papers on these topics.

Christina holds a M.P.P. from Harvard University's Kennedy School of Government.