

WILLIAM GREER is the vice president of government and education with SAP, overseeing its operations in the Central U.S. Region. Previously, he was the director of state and local market strategy for SAP, responsible for product direction and industry alignment for SAP's state and local efforts throughout North America. Will has specialized in assisting public organizations to plan, mobilize, complete, and measure results for their most significant technology and process improvement efforts for the duration of his career.

Will has been influential in strategic planning, system selections, and implementations for seven of the nation's ten largest urban school systems and three of the five largest state governments, as well as non-profit and citizen relations organizations in Colorado and New York, among others. Prior to joining SAP, Will was the senior vice president for public services for a large, diversified services firm, and was a manager in the government services group of a global consulting firm.

Will has served as a guest lecturer within the University of Wyoming Sol Trujillo eBusiness program, and as has taught high school economics in the Denver Junior Achievement Program as well as the Detroit Summer Finance Program. Will lives outside of Denver with his wife Jennifer and daughters Dylan and Tori.