

Jonathan Naimon is the founder and managing director of Light Green Advisors (LGA), an asset management firm that pioneered the "best in class" style of environmental sustainability investing in the US. LGA manages money for institutional investors such as the California State Teachers Retirement System (CALSTRS). LGA is distinguished by its practical approach toward financial implications of environmental issues such as climate change. Prior to founding LGA, Mr. Naimon held visiting professor posts at Carnegie Mellon and the Norwegian School of Management. Mr. Naimon led the corporate environmental research team at the Investor Responsibility Research Center, now part of Risk Metrics / ISS. Mr. Naimon has also held positions at Asea Brown Boveri, Combustion Engineering, ICF International (an environmental consulting firm), the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission, and the House of Representatives Energy & Commerce Committee. Mr. Naimon lives in Seattle, WA. LGA research and publications have been cited by the California Treasurer and have appeared in Environmental Finance and Responsible Investor.
