

G. A. SMITH's career includes leadership and investigative experience in local, military, and federal law enforcement. His career began when he enlisted into the United States Army Reserve Military Police in January 1991 and became a police officer with the city of Tallahassee in 1992. In 1994, Mr. Smith became a commissioned officer in the Army Reserve, where he commanded several deployable military police and criminal investigation units. In 1997, Mr. Smith served as an agent with the Drug Enforcement Administration in both the Miami and New Orleans Field Divisions.

In March 2001, Mr. Smith joined the Department of Energy, Office of Inspector General, where he led defense and other white-collar fraud investigative activities in California and Nevada. During the last eight years, Mr. Smith has served in increased management positions including operations officer, assistant special agent in charge and now special agent in charge. His investigative responsibility spans 26 states, over $8 billion in fiscal year spending (not including Recovery Act monies), and all technology related crimes.

Mr. Smith holds a bachelor's degree in criminology from Florida State University.