

NANCY VALLEY, partner, is the national industry director of KPMG's government sector which includes state and local government, higher education, research, and other non-profits. She is devoted exclusively to providing services to state and local governments. Ms. Valley has been with KPMG for 20 years, following five years' experience in finance roles, ultimately controller, in a large local government. Ms. Valley began her career at KPMG in the audit practice and has been a key leader in the successful growth of the advisory services practice in state and local government. She has dedicated most of her career to serving state and local governments. Ms. Valley has extensive experience performing program compliance, financial management, internal controls, and performance improvement reviews. Prior to joining KPMG, she also served as the controller for a mid-size New York State County.

Ms. Valley has been a partner for 15 years, and she serves as the overall lead partner for New York State, an Americas Account. She is actively involved in assisting client service and target pursuit teams in state and local government, and she works with the federal government team to identify synergies in advisory services offerings.

Ms. Valley is a certified public accountant licensed to practice in the state of New York and a certified governmental financial manager. She is also a member of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants, the New York State Society of Certified Public Accountants; New York State Government Finance Officers Association; Association of Government Accountants and the American Accounting Association.

Ms. Valley received a bachelor of science in accounting from Russell Sage College and is a lifetime resident of Albany, New York.